Photoshop is a powerful tool that will enable you to edit images and create your own content for your website or for print. To take your image editing skills to the next level, you can learn Photoshop by following this Free Photoshop Tutorials ebook. You'll get 53 short, simple-to-follow tutorials that will help you create amazing images. A couple hours of Photoshop studies is all it takes to learn the basics of the program. Once you master the basics, it's easy to become a master Photoshop manipulator. When looking for the best Photoshop tutorials, it's important to understand that the purpose of a tutorial is to teach people to do something. In this particular case, we'll be teaching you how to use Photoshop tools. While looking for the best Photoshop tutorial, we find the interactive tutorials, like those found on Lynda.com, to be the most effective ones because they give users the ability to make changes to the tutorial before submission. By making changes, you can practice what you've learned. If you're a beginner, you should start with the tutorials covering the most fundamental editing concepts. If you're an experienced photoshop user, you should start with the tutorials covering the new features and plugins. Photoshop tutorials can be pretty visual, as you'll see from the links in this guide. Some people enjoy it better if you tell them step-by-step what to do. If this is your preference, there are tutorials for that as well. We suggest going through the list of tutorials from the "Start Here" to the "Advanced" page. The page is divided in two sections, the first section consisting of tutorials to learn the basics, and the second consisting of tutorials that cover more advanced techniques, such as retouching. You should also make sure you read the posts on the Help pages of the site. These will give you more in-depth information about how to use Photoshop, although, these tutorials are geared more towards

Q: Does this code constitute an event handler? I'm just trying to make a class event handler for a TTimer. It's kind of for academic purposes, and I'm not sure if it's an event handler since it does not have a class name or need to be subscribed to a class. Also, is the Timer_TimerEvent code good or bad. I'm just curious if it's good or bad. unit MYTimer; interface uses Windows, Messages, SysUtils, Variants, Classes, Graphics, Controls, Forms, Dialogs, StdCtrls; type TMyTimer = class(TTimer) private FName: String; public constructor Create(Owner: TComponent); override; destructor Destroy; override; procedure setClock; property Name: String read FName write FName; property Mytime; property Stopped; property Running; procedure TimerTimerEvent; end; implementation const sTimeName = '1:2:3:4:5'; { TMyTimer } constructor TMyTimer.Create(Owner: TComponent); begin inherited Create(Owner); ObjectName := sTimeName; Timer := TTimer.Create(Self); Timer.OnTimer := @TimerTimerEvent; end; destructor TMyTimer.Destroy; begin Timer.Free; inherited Destroy; end; { event TimerTimerEvent } procedure TMyTimer.TimerTimerEvent; begin if Stopped then setClock else if Running then setClock else setClock; end; procedure TMyTimer.setClock; var el: integer; begin Timer.Enabled := false; el := time(6,02,19); Timer.Interval := 1; Timer.Enabled := true; Timer.OnTimer := @setClock; end; { TMyTimer
