Nrf-2 Antioxidant Response Induced by Resveratrol Attenuates Lung Fibrosis. Resveratrol (RES) is a polyphenol with antioxidant and anti-inflammatory properties. Although RES has been extensively studied in cancer, little is known regarding its potential role in pulmonary diseases. In this study, we investigated the effects of RES on lung fibrosis and the underlying mechanism of action in a mouse model of obstructive pulmonary disease. The data show that the application of RES by tracheal instillation attenuated fibrosis and inflammation in the lung tissue. This effect of RES was mediated by the activation of nuclear factor erythroid 2 related factor 2 (Nrf-2) antioxidant response elements (AREs) and the subsequent expression of antioxidant enzymes and, thus, increased the level of glutathione. Moreover, in vitro studies showed that the RES-induced production of prostaglandin E2 was significantly attenuated by Nrf-2 knockdown. Taken together, these results demonstrate that RES directly protects lung tissues from the injury caused by inflammatory responses and can thus be used as a potential therapeutic agent for the treatment of pulmonary diseases. J.P. Arora J.P. Arora is an Indian writer and film editor with an A.B. in English literature from Allahabad University, and a M.F.A. in screenwriting from the New York Film Academy. Personal life He lives in New Delhi. He has been married to his collaborator Sudha Arora since January 2006. Career Shekhar Kapur His first feature film as editor was the World War II epic, Bandit Queen starring the legendary acting couple, Paresh Rawal and Sushmita Sen, who played the lead roles in the film. Arora helped the long-time friends to put together their characters through camera. He also plays a significant role in the project because it was one of the only Indian films to be shot in English and feature two British actors. Bandit Queen was released in 1997, over 17 years after its principal shooting was done. Arora edited K.A. Abbas's film Bombay (2003), based on the 1993 Bombay bombing, for the A&F Records worldwide release. He later worked with Abbas on Bombay 2 (2005), the sequel to Bombay. Arora also edited Abbas' "Masterji" biopic, released in 2010. The September 2011 release of Bhool
