In my line of work, I notice how people use different strategies to teach themselves, and here are some of mine. • Think of it as a learning process. You can't learn all of the secrets you can't imagine. - Cleve Jones • If you want to learn about something, take the time to find out what the big concepts are. Read a book, then read the book again. The book will refer to the concepts. The concept will explain the ideas in the book. The ideas will draw implications from the book that will help you understand the rest of the book. Eventually you will have internalized the book in your brain. - Cleve Jones • Consider the wisdom of Thomas Edison. "The true measure of intelligence is not a test of memory, but an appreciation of consequences." - Thomas Edison • Get outside, into the world, and learn how things work. Don't read a book and say, "Hey, that's it? That's how it's done?" Start doing, and do the obvious. Do it the way that they did it in the '70s. - Jeff Bezos • It's important to have a culture of learning. It's not enough to have smart people. You have to have a culture of sharing knowledge. - Jeff Bezos • You can't learn everything, but you can learn to learn. In the end you gotta learn the lessons of the world, and you can't learn those unless you're open to learning. You've got to learn the facts of the world, and you can't do that unless
