SharpenerOne is a sharpening tool and plugin for Photoshop and Elements. SharpenerOne is a fast, easy-to-use tool that automatically sharpens a photo without even creating an adjustment layer. SharpenerOne is like a different kind of sharpening filter and it can be used on RAW files. SharpenerOne is designed to sharpen your image without the use of complicated, time-consuming and error-prone manual sharpening. SharpenerOne does this by using the pixel interpolation it uses to determine the areas of the image that need sharpening. Pixel interpolation is the process by which a computer algorithm works to determine the pixels that it should not be interpolating into or out of the image. Pixel interpolation is used primarily because it results in less distortion than the other sharpenings methods used by SharpenerOne. Getting as close as possible to what the eye sees, the sharpening that SharpenerOne does is to nearly eliminate pixelization. SharpenerOne does not use any of the common sharpening methods to sharpen photos. Pixel interpolation with SharpenerOne is what results in more accuracy and less grain and noise. Pixel combination of a sharpening filter and light reconstruction. It sharpens and shifts lighting in a photo, so that it matches the look of light that was captured by the camera on the image, and light comes to the eyes naturally. Keylight uses light reconstruction to rebuild light in a photo, but unlike light editing, which simply copies, reconstructs and modifies existing light, light reconstruction is a whole new process which requires more technical skills and a deeper understanding of the mechanisms of the human eye to learn. Keylight uses a super sharpening filter to recreate the light effects obtained from the light sensor that captured the photo. It combines "Seach Light" (a totally new, never before seen technique) with the global "Lightening" filter and "Light
