Ships are great, but living in space is even better. Fly around in your ship, look at the stars, get out your gamepad and use your ship as a walking shield against attacks by enemy ships. Or use it as a weapon to destroy anything that gets in your way, from asteroids to the military ship that has overtaken you. It's your universe. Bugs General We have reported a few issues (and gotten some help from players) Several bugs have been reported and a fix has been released. We wanted to let you know what was causing the issues, and some of our plan of action to fix them, as soon as possible. Missing icons We are aware of an issue where certain icons don't display in the game. With the game update we are releasing on Friday, we are fixing this issue. Other issues The server connection speed is now a limited resource. We are trying to increase its speed, but it has been difficult to do so quickly. We are aware of a few issues that players are facing with some of our Ships. In certain cases, players are unable to get into the game due to unstable server connection. We are actively working on getting the servers back online as soon as possible. For now, we can say that there isn't any permanent fix, but we are working on getting it to the point where it will not happen any more. In certain cases, when a player equips a new Ship with an upgrade that the server didn't know about, then returns to the previous ship, the inventory will be invisible again. We are trying to fix this as soon as possible, but at the same time want to make sure that you have a chance to find the upgrade as quickly as possible. In some cases, when you leave the game and return to the game later, the inventory will be invisible again. We are trying to fix this as soon as possible. Restore from Replay It is possible to replay the game after the update and get the extra ship or upgrade that was missing. This is caused by how the game is distributed on Steam Workshop and how Steam Workshop has it's own update rules for files and their associated versions. We are aware of an issue that makes the replay option not always work properly. This is caused by how the game is distributed on Steam Workshop and how Steam Workshop has it's own update rules for files and their associated versions.

This is definitely a game that I have to have. It is hard to explain to others what this game is about but if you have ever played the 4X games (Civilisation, Master of Orion, Stellaris, Alpha Centauri) then you will know what this is about. The basic premise is that you start on a "Beginning" planet which is hard to get out of that starting point. Then you can slowly build a fleet of starships, assign them to planets, set up bases with cities, planets should grow an economy and things should start to move. The game is entirely turn based meaning that you don't have to do anything except battle and in between that you need to wait for events to happen. The game looks great. The graphics and music are really good. I have a feeling that the best part about this game are the music and graphics. This game is also very addictive which is why I bought it and will probably be playing until something else gets in the way. I have played the original DOS version of this game on retro-computers. It runs amazing on my retro-computer and I would really like to see this version to run as good as it did on the original. I played this game by myself. It is very easy to become obsessed with this game. This is the first in a series of games that I will be covering on my c9d1549cdd

An Overview:

Black Skylands is another chapter in the award-winning Black Skylands: X-Nera 2011 ProdéB game series. It is the 5th chapter in the series just like the previous four. The five chapters, in order, are: X-Nera 2011 ProdéA, X-Nera 2011 ProdéB, X-Nera 2011 ProdéC, X-Nera 2011 ProdéD, and Black Skylands. This chapter focuses on the X-Nera 2011 ProdéE form of the game.

The gameplay is similar to X-Nera 2011 ProdéE, but the atmosphere is different. Instead of being in a sprawling desert, they are in an urban setting. The urban location makes use of the environments in a way that improves the game greatly.
