Dream Flash is an action game where the player takes control of a soul. The dreamscape is flooded with enemies that the soul must defeat in order to progress. Players will use a wide array of items in order to travel deep into the dreamscape, learn about it's history, and fight against hard enemies. As players play the game, the soul gains recollection on everything encountered. The more the player fights and explores, the more memories the soul will learn. The memories will be used to progress the story by giving the soul's memories a polish and shaping it into a narrative style from my dreams. The soul will transform into stronger and more versatile forms that can be used to explore more of the dreamscape. Each transformation will unlock the additional powers and abilities of the soul. As the soul learns more about the dreamscape, it will be able to read and write in order to gain access to more of the dream. A: The game, as it stands, seems too similar to The Binding of Isaac. Dream Flash is a rogue-lite that looks like this. The Binding of Isaac is a game where you need to find your way out of a house filled with monsters. It's very simple. There are a total of 100 floors and you should make your way to the top to escape the game. Every time you die, the game's over. Compared to Binding of Isaac, Dream Flash looks a bit like this: As you can see, the objectives are very similar. So if you play Dream

Flash, you'll probably end up confused about where you've seen this before. The present invention relates to a cord winding machine, and more particularly to a cord winding machine with a cord clamping mechanism. The conventional cord winding machine typically comprises a set of belt driven sprockets and a set of drive rollers, between which a number of formed coils are usually rolled on the drive rollers and then transferred to the belt driven sprockets for winding. But the weight of the sprockets and the rollers, and the moving rates of the sprockets and the rollers are not easily controlled and are inconvenient to adjust.Project Summary Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer-related mortality in men and women worldwide. Small cell lung cancer (SCLC), the most aggressive form of lung cancer, is highly malignant with early dissemination to extrapulmonary sites. Despite aggressive multimodal therapy, the overall prognosis for patients with
