Depending on the type of project you want to create, you can select from among many specialized programs. In general, however, you can use one of the following to create photo-editing projects: * **Pixelmator:** It's a newcomer to the photo-editing category, but it has a great interface, is easy to use, and will get the job done. It creates pixel-based images, and the best part is that you don't need to learn to draw with it. The images created by Pixelmator will look extremely similar to the original source image and even have the same resolution. * **GIMP:** Like Photoshop, it's an incredibly powerful image-editing program but is much easier to use. It is free and is available for both Windows and Macintosh users. GIMP can create images that look much like those created by Photoshop but in a much simpler interface. * **Paint.net:** Its interface is similar to Adobe Photoshop's, and it

, my very best friend, makes it clear that he's deeply in love with me and we live happily ever after. He takes me to the wedding and gives me a beautiful diamond ring." As you can see, having met "The Boy Next Door" comes with many benefits. But you know what, as for actual love, I'd be a fool to believe the movies. They're Hollywood. Everyone's getting the Hollywood ending (except that nice Asian couple in _Ghostbusters II_ ). I'm not. I mean, if there was such a thing as the perfect man, I'd love him, too. "But isn't he too old for you?" one of my girlfriends asked. Yes, he is, but he's an old soul and completely in touch with his inner child. He loves me. He's patient. He's there for me when I'm hurt or upset. And he treats me with respect. I met him in January 1995, when I was pregnant. We fell in love almost immediately. He lives just twenty minutes away and we often drive to the restaurant together, or I'll meet him at his parents' house for dinner. We've been together ever since. I believe you can choose the love in your life. You'll find it, whether you're seven or seventy-seven. ## AUTHOR'S NOTE It seems impossible to get an accurate count of the number of books that appear on my favorite bookshelf. My children add new tomes all the time. I suppose it wouldn't be unreasonable to say that my personal collection is in the thousands. My mother had a similar collection, as did her mother, and I have been passed down books by a former lover, a neighbor, a cousin, and the woman who raised me. I love them all—they're the first people I call when I get stuck or have a problem. All of my books have been relevant to me in some way. There's the one that helped me realize that my first love was the right one and all the women who've helped me write this book, which is very different from the stories that appear in my other books. Now, friends, I have a question for you. Have you read _The Body Book?_ Many of you have. I'd like to say a big THANK YOU for your support. It is a great pleasure for me to know that what I wrote resonated so deeply with you, especially because I know that you have

What's New In?

1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to machines for reducing foods, and more particularly, to an automatic food chopper wherein a food, contained in a plastic bag, is turned upside down, cut open to expose its underside, and then a metal blade pushes the contents of the bag in a straight down motion toward a metal grid located below the bag. 2. Description of the Prior Art Heretofore, food choppers have been developed wherein a food, such as, a leg of a chicken or an ear of a pig, can be reduced into pieces of like size and shape. The chopper disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,167,723 includes a housing with a plastic bag mounted therein which folds over and encloses the food when it is inserted into the housing. A pair of V-shaped projections extends from the housing adjacent the bottom of the bag to assist in guiding the food downwardly into a pair of cutting elements which scrape the food, thereby reducing the same to pieces of like size and shape. The cutting elements are generally a pair of elongated plates spaced apart from one another and located at opposite sides of the machine. A pair of rotating blades extend between and above the plates. The food bag is provided with a number of openings therein to allow its contents to be reduced and prepared for cooking. A clamping mechanism secures the ends of the food bag as the bag is withdrawn from the housing. The food bag is dispensed with the clamping mechanism and a drive mechanism, which may be a spring-loaded sliding plate on the housing, maintains the bag at an upright position and adjacent the housing. When a food product such as chicken legs is inserted into the housing through a slot in the rear of the housing, the bag unfolds and the food is enclosed therein. U.S. Pat. No. 4,168,978 discloses a food chopper wherein a supply of food is held in a housing in a position above a housing cover. A discharge slot is located in the housing cover and communicates with a discharge opening in the housing through which the chopped food is removed. A motor drive shaft is connected to an arm which is mounted in the cover. The arm is moved upwardly to force the food downwardly and toward the discharge slot located in the cover. A pair of jaws are spaced apart and located adjacent the top surface of the food in a position to grasp the food. An upper portion of the arm is mounted on a shaft which is connected to a
