I tried to override the create in the models but I get an error because the button is created after the create. I also tried to override the after_create in the models, but the error still happens after the create. I've also tried to override the post_create in the models, but it looks like it's never been called, I should add that the filter is working good in that point. In the end of the file Filter.post_create.rb in BaseFilterMultiProcess I added: filter.create But it always returns nil. So how should I override this? I'm using Rails 4. A: My solution was very simple, but it was a bit tricky to figure it out. The file was called Filter.rb in BaseFilterMultiProcess. In that file I just had to change a line to add one more line in the code so I could override the create method. I also tried to change the file post_create.rb and I was able to get the new method to be called, but the error was still happening. Then I added another file called Filter.rb, which contained everything in the post_create.rb file but I changed the file name from post_create.rb to something else and it worked. I'm not sure why the error was coming from the post_create.rb file and not from Filter.rb, but whatever, it worked. /*=====

Q: Error with feeding an rda file in ggplot2 I am trying to feed in an rda file to ggplot2, but get the following error: library(ggplot2) ggplot(mydata) + geom_point() Error in loadNamespace(i, c(lib.loc,.libPaths()), versionCheck = vI[[i]]) : there is no package called 'multcompViewer' I used to feed this rda file to binomialGLM() in nlme package. Is there a way to feed this rda file to ggplot2? A: R is complaining because you're using the multcomp package which is not part of ggplot2, see this github issue. You can use the multcompViewer package to plot multivariate GLMs. See this R-tutorial for how to do it. library(ggplot2) library(multcompViewer) ggplot(mydata) + geom_point() Due to environmental concerns, it is desirable to recycle and reuse as much material as possible. To this end, plastic containers are often returned to manufacturers and refurbished or replaced with new containers. During refurbishment and/or replacement, it is common for the interior of the container to be cleaned and/or washed to remove residual food. In addition, it is generally desirable to keep products in the container as clean as possible to prevent spoiling and/or odor transfer. FIG. 1 schematically illustrates a side view of a known container 10 comprising a container portion 12 and an optionally formed lid 14. The container portion 12 is configured to receive material
