To investigate the biomechanical impact of stand-alone NeuCoat™ and foil-bedding biosynthetic keratoprosthesis (KPro) on healing of perforated tectonic keratoprosthesis (pTPK). Fresh pig eyes, after enucleation, were used for TPK within 2 days. pTPK were implanted with the stand-alone NeuCoat™ (NC) (refractive index 1.45, diameter 9 mm) or foil-bedding biosynthetic (FB) KPro (refractive index 1.5, diameter 10 mm) and analysed via unwound inflation testing in an in vitro experimental setup. The KPro models included one stand-alone NC or one FB with various combinations of donor button diameters (7 mm, 8 mm or 10 mm, respectively) for comparison between KPro models (pTPK NC vs. pTPK FB). After implantation, inflations with 0-20 atm were applied and unwinding of prestrain was measured. No differences were detected between the two groups of KPros, but a clear effect of donor diameter on the amount of healing was observed between 7 mm and 8 mm and between 8 mm and 10 mm. No differences in biomechanical properties were detected between stand-alone and foil-bedding KPros. However, the effects of donor diameter demonstrated a gradual increase of mechanical stability with increasing donor size.Q: How do I make these

Retinopathy is a common microvascular complication of diabetes. We have previously described that activation of the receptor for the anti-inflammatory cysteinyl leukotrienes (CysLT(1)R) reduces posts ischemic damage in the retina of diabetic rats. Lipoxin A(4) (LXA(4)), a pro-resolution, bioactive, and potent inhibitor of CysLT(1)R, has been shown to be protective in a variety of models of tissue injury. Given the role of leukotrienes and CysLT(1)R in diabetic retinopathy, the aim of the present study was to examine the expression of LXA(4) receptor (BLT1) in the retina of streptozotocin-induced diabetic rats and rats with partial retinal ischemia/reperfusion injury. Immunohistochemistry using a polyclonal anti-BLT1 antibody revealed the presence of BLT1 in the retina of control rats. An increase in BLT1 immunoreactivity was seen in diabetic rats compared with controls and in rats with partial retinal ischemia/reperfusion injury, as indicated by a gradient from the inner to the outer plexiform layer. Double immunofluorescence in control and diabetic rats showed that the increase in BLT1 staining in diabetic rats was localized to the Müller cells and to blood vessels. These data suggest that LXA(4), via activation of BLT1, may be protective against retinal ischemia/reperfusion injury in diabetes, a complication associated with inflammation and oxidative stress. - 1004687 - -4. 4*g Collect the terms in -30*f + 6*f - 2*f. -26*f Collect the terms in 4*d**2
