The Heroes Classroom The Heros Classroom is the first book in the "Big Hero 6" series written by Stan Lee, and illustrated by Don Newton. The book follows Hiro, the parkour-inclined karate expert of the story, as he uses the magic of his video game to save the day. Plot Hiro Nakai is an expert in Parkour, despite being, by all accounts, a "nerd". Due to his need to use his "gigantic brain" in the Hero Time game, Hiro has felt obliged to make friends with the game's creators, but he does not use his parkour ability inside the game, as they had changed the layout. The game is interrupted by a natural disaster, which devastates the parkour track and the villain behind it. Hiro is contacted by one of the game creators, seen in the second episode of the series, who enables Hiro's ability to "jump" in real life. Hiro makes a new character with this ability, which allows him to succeed. The series features a series of big events, some of which are decided by Hiro Nakai's decisions. Characters Big Hero 6 Hiro Nakai, nicknamed "Hiro" or "Hero", is an 11-year-old boy with a passion for Parkour. He loves playing video games and is an expert at Hero Time. Hiro also has a strong reason to want to save the video game creators from the villainous Count von Count. Michelangelo, nicknamed "Don" or "Masterpiece", is the creator of the game Hero Time and Hiro's friend. He is also the creator of Hiro's character, who is a mixture of Hiro's personality and abilities. Hiro's potential in making a new character is seen as a challenge by Michelangelo, which results in the creation of Donata. The combination of Hiro's ideas and Michelangelo's thoughts results in a new character, Donata, who is voiced by Salma Hayek in the English dub. He is the twin brother of Hiro's love interest, Baymax. Antagonists Count von Count, who is a common cold who traps Hiro and the video game creators on his video game world.
