As the Federal Government makes what it says will be "enhanced" efforts to fight violent crime, Coalition frontbencher Mal Washer is warning more laws are not the answer. Mr Washer said he understands people want to feel safer and in some cases that means new laws. He said there is no reason why crime cannot be tackled through the existing framework. "My experience [as state police minister] was that far too often legislation would be introduced in the parliament which had very little if any value for police or for community safety," he told The World Today. "And I would say that in each of those cases, we had some good success. "When we were asked to implement a new piece of legislation that was something entirely different, and had no real value for police or community safety. "In fact, in the final analysis, I think that we were able to reduce crime." Mr Washer said it was easy for politicians to look at the headlines and decide a new law is needed. "We have all talked about beefed up police, more police on the street," he said. "I hear people say 'we need more police, we need more guns, we need better detection techniques and so on.' "But what I wonder is the value of that? Because the reality is police numbers, in some cases, is simply good management. "The fact is - and we know this - that when you send more police to the street, that means that the police have less time with which to conduct business, with which to investigate, to solve crime. "And there's a general feeling that when there's less police out there, the police are better able to investigate crime. "I think that's a bit of a myth and a fallacy." Mr Washer said laws are usually "meant to be palatable to the legislators, not to the police". "If you speak to police officers out on the street - the reality is they don't feel that they need more laws," he said. "They need more time, more resources and better resources to conduct an investigation. "The reality is that is what they need, not new laws."Soon you'll be able to tweet a photo with the #explorelife hashtag to see which species are a good fit for your garden. A potential role for the endoplasmic reticulum stress pathway in high-fat diet-induced endothelial dysfunction in the liver. It has been reported that the endoplasmic reticulum (ER) stress pathway mediates hepatic fibrosis through the induction of collagen production by transforming growth factor-β signaling. However, the role of ER stress in the pathogenesis of hepatic insulin resistance remains unknown. In this study, we aimed to explore the mechanism by which high-fat diet-induced insulin resistance in the liver. Male C57BL/6 mice were fed with a high-fat diet or standard diet for 13 weeks. We observed that the hyperinsulinemic-euglycemic clamp test, in vivo glucose uptake by PET and the hepatic [corrected] Akt signaling. Immunofluorescence was performed to examine the distribution and localization of ER stress molecules and insulin signaling molecules. Expression of phospho-Akt, phospho-IRS1, and phospho-p70S6K was significantly decreased in the livers of high-fat diet-fed mice compared with those fed with a standard diet. Immunofluorescence staining revealed that glucose transporter 2 (Glut2) and phosphorylated insulin receptor substrate 1 (pIRS1) in liver endothelial cells (LECs) were colocalized with Vimentin, as confirmed by co-localization. Analysis of the activation of the ER stress signaling molecule phosphorylated eukaryotic initiation factor 2 α (p-eIF2α) showed a significant increase in the number of LECs with a positive staining for p-eIF2α. Next, we examined the effects of inhibiting the ER stress signaling pathway on the insulin resistance induced by high-fat diet. Treatment of LECs with 4-phenylbutyrate, an ER stress inhibitor, significantly improved the insulin resistance induced by a high-fat diet in vitro. The results of this study suggest that ER stress molecules are involved in high-fat diet-induced endothelial insulin resistance in the liver through their localization to LECs. Furthermore, we propose that liver endothelial ER stress is an important therapeutic target for the treatment of hepatic insulin resistance induced by a high-fat diet.Acute myeloid leukaemia (AML) is a blood cancer that affects the cells of the bone marrow, and is often fatal. It usually occurs in older people, who are more likely
