Alberta's economy is in a state of serious shock, according to a new report from BMO which says the slowdown will quickly lead to a recession unless better policy measures are taken. The report, released Wednesday, found that the province's economy has significantly weakened in the past two quarters. It says Alberta's economic growth has slowed to below the national average and unemployment is the highest in nearly three decades. The Bank of Montreal report also warns that the negative impact is not limited to the province's oil-based economy, but includes the provincial manufacturing sector and construction, among others. It calls on the government to do more than just keep spending levels frozen at 2016 levels, as the province is doing, to get the economy moving again. "It is important to remember the current crisis was not caused by the fact that the economy is in an 'oil-cycle' slowdown. Nor was it the result of an unexpected shift in the direction of Canadian trade. Alberta's growth deceleration is a direct consequence of policy driven by a belief that fiscal restraint is the appropriate response to economic weakness," BMO economist Sal Guatieri said in a statement. "Whether the situation is transitory or long lasting will depend on Alberta's ability to repair the fiscal deficit without offsetting that with higher debt or a re-acceleration of debt expansion." The report says it expects the recession to start in the second half of 2019, spread across the province and impact the provincial GDP by 1.4 per cent in the next fiscal year.
