In the past week, tributes have been paid to the late actor Leonard Nimoy, who has died at the age of 83. Well-known for his role as Spock in the TV shows 'Star Trek' and 'Star Trek II', he has been the voice of many other sci-fi characters, including Data, Fett, T'Pol from 'Star Trek: New Frontier', and R2-D2 from 'The Empire Strikes Back', to name a few. Nimoy was born in Boston, Massachusetts on March 31, 1931. Although, he never worked in space, his projects featured many of the spaceships from his most famous works. Leonard was also the writer, director, editor, and producer of the 1970 documentary 'Live Long and Prosper'. He began acting in the early 1970s, with his first film role coming in 1973 in 'The Poseidon Adventure'. But he really began to shine in Star Trek with 'Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan' in 1982. It was after that breakthrough role that he began to become a regular actor in television and film. He played a number of prominent characters from the Star Trek Universe, including the role of T'Pol in the animated TV series Star Trek: New Frontier. In 2012, after being diagnosed with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, Nimoy announced that he would retire from acting completely. He left us with many memorable and moving tributes, expressing his passion for Star Trek, his life and his passing in interviews during the last years. At the time of his death, he was working on a biography called 'I Am Spock', in which he looked back at his life and career, making his final statement on Star Trek. He was a true and magnificent actor in the true and magnificent series Star Trek and Star Trek II.
