Claude-Marie Rodgers Claude-Marie Rodgers (April 25, 1802 – September 30, 1846) was an American military figure. Biography Early life Claude-Marie Rodgers was born in Wilmington, North Carolina on April 25, 1802. He was the son of Col. John Rodgers and the grandson of Col. Henry Rodgers, III, of Pennsylvania. Career As a youth he joined the company of his father, and later that of Col. John Rodgers, but remained a non-commissioned officer and was left in charge of the military school at Savannah, Georgia. From his boyhood, Rodgers had attracted the attention of Gen. Nelson to him as his favorite son. On the departure of Nelson from Savannah he joined him, and in 1822 was appointed aide-de-camp on the staff of Gen. Andrew Jackson, the first of many appointments to that distinguished position. After the removal of Nelson in the next year, Rodgers remained with Jackson, who never had an aide-de-camp who was so intimately connected with him as Rodgers, who was at the receiving end of the great military leader's affections, and was never even separated from him. When the Seminole War broke out in 1835, Rodgers was appointed to the command of the forces in that country; he took an active part in the engagements. He returned to duty with Jackson at the seat of war in 1836, and remained with him until the close of his military career, which he terminated in 1840. He was at the head of his department for some time after the close of the war, serving as second in command to Gen. S. D. Lee, to whom he had been recommended by Jackson. The rest of his career was confined to his native state, where he was elected to the convention of the State of North Carolina, April, 1842. He died of yellow fever in Norfolk, Virginia, September 30, 1846. He was buried at the churchyard of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Wilmington. Legacy His family removed to Pennsylvania, where he married and was the father of two sons and two daughters. References Attribution Further reading Robert G.
