Inspired by the Victorian era, The Game Star Zeal 4x is a highly political interactive serial that will answer the question, "What if the aliens landed and asked, 'What would you do?'" It's also a slave ship simulation, an anti-capitalist tech satire, a social commentary on alien-human relations, and an examination of the relationship between civil liberties and government power. Soundtrack is available as an album on iTunes. Interactive Novel Sections: Mnemonic Matrix: The core of the story is a series of interconnected short stories, all with titles which are words or phrases representative of a particular virtue: Temperance, Humanity, Justice, Piety, Love, Generosity, Mercy, or Hope. The exact titles are noted in the descriptions. There are three ways to play the game: Read the Mnemonic Matrix. In this role, you are the one who steps into the role of the oppressed, the downtrodden, the outcast. Read one of the interlinked short stories. The stories are randomly generated based on your choices. Read one of the short stories and choose which of the virtue-oriented characters to follow in order to successfully achieve one of the game's endings. They Might Be Giants: The New American Dream: The Mnemonic Matrix contains the following bonus game: Fan-generated interactive fiction based on a part of the Mnemonic Matrix, created by fans through the interactive fiction program IF-IFe. Interactive Fiction and Fan Fiction: All of the stories contained in the Mnemonic Matrix are written with the intention that they will be turned into fan fiction, whether interactive fiction, short stories, or flash fictions. All of the stories contain prompts that will provide ideas for interactive fiction projects. All of the stories are written to encourage characters to express themselves freely through creative, poetic, and artistic means. The fan fiction project has an interactive narrative as well as additional sections for fan commentary and fan art (see below). Post-Production: The game was edited by Sheri Struck-Stevenson, who also founded and edited The Yes Means Yes Book Series. What's new:

  Forthree The Gift That Keeps On Giving! Terrific for leveling up, great for staking and great for w/w. Most impressive aspect about this Minion Horde? i) All of its talents are relevant and valuable, some more than others.e.g:-when you take Enact the Righteous, you get another Enact the Righteous for free from this pack. i) How many different minions can you make from this? Isn't that what's important? i.e.: Either they should have been in packs before, or the game should be changed around to make it feasible for packs to have lots of different built-in variations, or "Because we can!"? i) "Adding to the Core" - another faction for the Alliance. What would be the suggested "Silver" Level Distribution of this? i) "Kitchen Sink" - is kitsayskill the same as Treasure Chest? i) Though I like the idea of making GUIs that are available when the online players run the expansion pack, perhaps it would be nice to be able to run the expansion pack out-of-the-box without depending on a GUIs?? Thank You for this forum. I thank you for the insight provided, including your reaction to comments posted by my Valrus. Your comments on behalf of my children help provide some entertainment value to me, which I appreciate. I feel, with the expense of making this, I would need to see a cost per unit. Is the $0.50 cents pricetag representative? I would need 5k to play the game, and would like to know what the minimum cost per unit is at in terms of my overall strategy for playing this. Why? Both games have a sense of "playability" to them. I just don't know as a faction player if Horde is a good fit for me as a Female player, though it is a good idea for me, I don't feel it's the one I'd really enjoy playing - it's a bit much of a "pressing issues" button for me to push. I too like the idea of adding a 3rd faction and will definitely try this when it becomes available. When I started playing WoW 1.0, it was an Alliance only world, and later Horde, then yet another Alliance. Same goes for any most of the TBCs
