Cancer stem cells (CSCs) are a subpopulation of cancer cells with the ability to self-renew indefinitely, drive tumor growth, and reside at the invasive margins. We have developed a functional system to identify and isolate CSCs in the high-grade serous ovarian cancer (HGSOC) cell line TOV112D. A unique platform for in vitro and in vivo drug testing was implemented in the HGSOC CSC system. TOV112D cells cultured in the presence of nestin or fibronectin in the growth media were able to expand over 350-fold and exhibit resistance to the chemotherapeutic agent paclitaxel. Further differentiation of these cells, which expressed the epithelial cell surface marker E-cadherin and lacked the mesenchymal markers vimentin and fibronectin, confirmed the epithelial phenotype. When paclitaxel was used in combination with different environmental cues, both fibronectin and nestin induction caused increased cell death in TOV112D cells. However, the CSCs were not able to "escape" the drug and regrow. When the CSCs were placed in a non-adherent condition with reduced drug exposure, the majority of CSCs died within 3 weeks. Our CSC model demonstrated that although the majority of cells were in quiescence (6d1f23a050)
